The NACPAC board noted the city is facing revenue shortfalls and other budget pressures because of the struggling economy. "It is critical that the city council deal with the budget challenges by first reducing costs so as not to demand unnecessary tax increases on local businesses and residents, tax hikes that might slow an economic recovery to our community," said Jeff Davis, NACPAC Chairman.

"The City of Naperville is now more developed and the Council needs leaders who understand the need for economic investment in our community," said Dennis Culloton, Vice Chairman of NACPAC. "Each of the endorsed candidates demonstrated that they had thought about these issues and had an action plan to address the concerns."
